Scope

This annual report offers a general overview of the main initiatives and activities carried out by the International Association of Educating Cities (IAEC) during 2015.

The aim of this report is not to provide a detailed description of the actions carried out by the network and its members, but to present the major lines of work of the Secretariat, the Executive Committee and the various networks and delegations of the Association.

With this internal and external instrument of communication, we seek to explain the progress made, while at the same time encourage new cities and institutions to join forces so as to improve the quality of life in the cities through education.

Prologue

I would like to take advantage of this platform to pass on my greetings to you once again as President and to take stock of the work that has been done by the International Association of Educating Cities (IAEC) throughout 2015.

This past year I have joined as some of you this privileged space of work provided to us by the IAEC for sharing experiences, socialising tools, knowledge and methodologies, and very especially for creating a sense of community and for building bridges of solidarity between cities that share the same principles.

The Charter of Educating Cities is now 25 years old, which is undoubtedly a cause for celebration. Some of our cities have been committed towards the principles of the Charter from the beginning, while others have gradually joined on the way from very diverse geographical areas, currently gathering together 480 cities from all over the world. Each of us share the commitment towards working on, and ensuring, the universal right to an inclusive quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all. We are working on achieving the fact that our cities become learning venues, where education goes beyond the limits of the classroom and reaches the street, being joined in this task by the vision and complicity of multiple and varied agents. In other words, we are committed towards improving, from education, the life of the people who live together in our cities.

Our activity has been focused on joining forces and efforts in this common cause so as to define proposals for the urban space to transmit values and attitudes that contribute to counteracting the uneducating inertia and forces, thanks to the participation of an active, critical and transforming citizenship which involves itself in the development and improvement of its surroundings, contributing in this way to turning the current period of crisis also into a time of opportunities.

In this sense, local governments play a key role, and the fact that during this period the number of members hasn't reduced, but in fact has stayed the same or even grown modestly, encourages us to keep working with responsibility to continue promoting and strengthening the network. I would also like to take this opportunity to publicly welcome the cities who joined the IAEC in 2015. As well as to congratulate those who continue their commitment towards the principles of the Charter of Educating Cities, setting in motion policies and initiatives aimed at gaining progress in the accomplishment of their commitment, reviewing the proposals and actions being undertaken so as to be able to tackle the new challenges in a better way.

In line with this, I am pleased to inform you that in Barcelona the commitment continues to be alive, and, so as to gain in cross-departmental coordination and in efficiency, we have created the Barcelona Educating City Department. By means of this, we have made a firm commitment so that the educational action remains present in all our policies.

We encourage you to take a look at the pages of this annual report so as to get an idea of the vitality of the IAEC, and of the numerous and varied activities that the different networks and working groups have carried out throughout this past year, in fulfilment of the action plan. None of these would have been possible to achieve without the commitment and involvement of so many cities and people. Thank you very much to all of you for a job well done.

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to mention that both the IAEC Executive Committee as well as the Organising and Scientific Committees of the 14th International Congress have been working intensively on defining the contents and structure of our next International Congress. It would be a great pleasure for me to meet you in Rosario to share our challenges and achievements in policies aimed at better living together so that our cities become more inclusive venues which are designed placing people at the centre.

Ms. Ada Colau

Mayor of Barcelona
and IAEC President

Who we are?

Founded in 1994, the International Association of Educating Cities (IAEC) is a non-profit organisation, constituted as a permanent structure of collaboration among the local governments committed towards the Charter of Educating Cities, which is the roadmap for the cities who make up the association. Any local governments who make this commitment can become active members of the Association, irrespective of their administrative competences in education.

Goals

- To promote the fulfilment of the principles of the Charter of Educating Cities.
- To highlight the role of the local governments as educating agents and to foster their recognition as key actors for tackling the challenges of the 21st century.
- To strengthen the institutional capacities and to improve the governance in the member cities.
- To take the voice of the local governments to international and national organisations regarding issues of interest for the members cities.
- To make the Charter and the Association known to new cities.

Strategic Action Plan 2015-2018

The major strategic goals fixed for the period 2015-2018 are:

- To increase the political impact of the IAEC.
- To improve the capacities of the local governments.
- To promote the reflection around the concept of the Educating City and to develop its application in various fields.
- To consolidate the IAEC as a global network.

Organisation

General Assembly

The General Assembly is the main body of the IAEC and comprises all the cities that make up the Association. Its role is to discuss and vote on strategic questions regarding the functioning of the organisation, to adopt agreements and control the activity of the management body. In 2015, the General Assembly met up in an ordinary session in Turin (13th March).

Executive Committee

The functions of the management, running, execution and representation of the Association correspond to this body. It is made up of between 11 and 15 members who hold their position for a period of 4 years and can be re-elected consecutively. In 2015, the Executive Committee met in Turin (13-14th March) and in Rosario (16-17th October).

The Executive Committee is made up of the following cities:

- Presidency and Secretariat: Barcelona.
- Vice-presidency: Rosario.
- Treasury: Rennes.
- Members: Changwon, Granollers, Guadalajara, Lisbon, Lokossa, Lomé, Medellín, Porto, Santo André, Sorocaba, Tampere and Turin.

Secretariat

The Secretariat is the body responsible for the everyday management of the Association. It is committed to work for the fulfilment of the goals fixed by the General Assembly and Executive Committee. It provides support for the territorial networks and member cities and promotes the exchange of experiences, resources and the generation of synergies between them.

Networks

The IAEC promotes the creation of territorial and thematic networks. The territorial networks are decentralized branches made up of member cities from a specific territory. For their part, the thematic networks bring together cities interested in working in a joint way around a specific topic, either with cities from the same country or region, or with cities from other countries.

The networks represent a fundamental axis so that an Association of these characteristics can grow and provide specific attention to the needs of each territory. As a consequence, the IAEC allocates around one third of the revenues from the fees to provide support for the territorial networks and delegations. The cities that coordinate them and those that support them, contribute their effort, resources and knowledge.

By means of the organisation of all types of activities, the networks strengthen the exchanges, the cooperation and the common projects among their members. In the territorial networks, joint strategies are developed with the aim of establishing common positions regarding topics or issues that can influence the local policies. Cooperation is also promoted with other networks of municipalities, institutions or group collectives with common interests.

During 2015, several member cities hosted meetings of the different territorial networks.

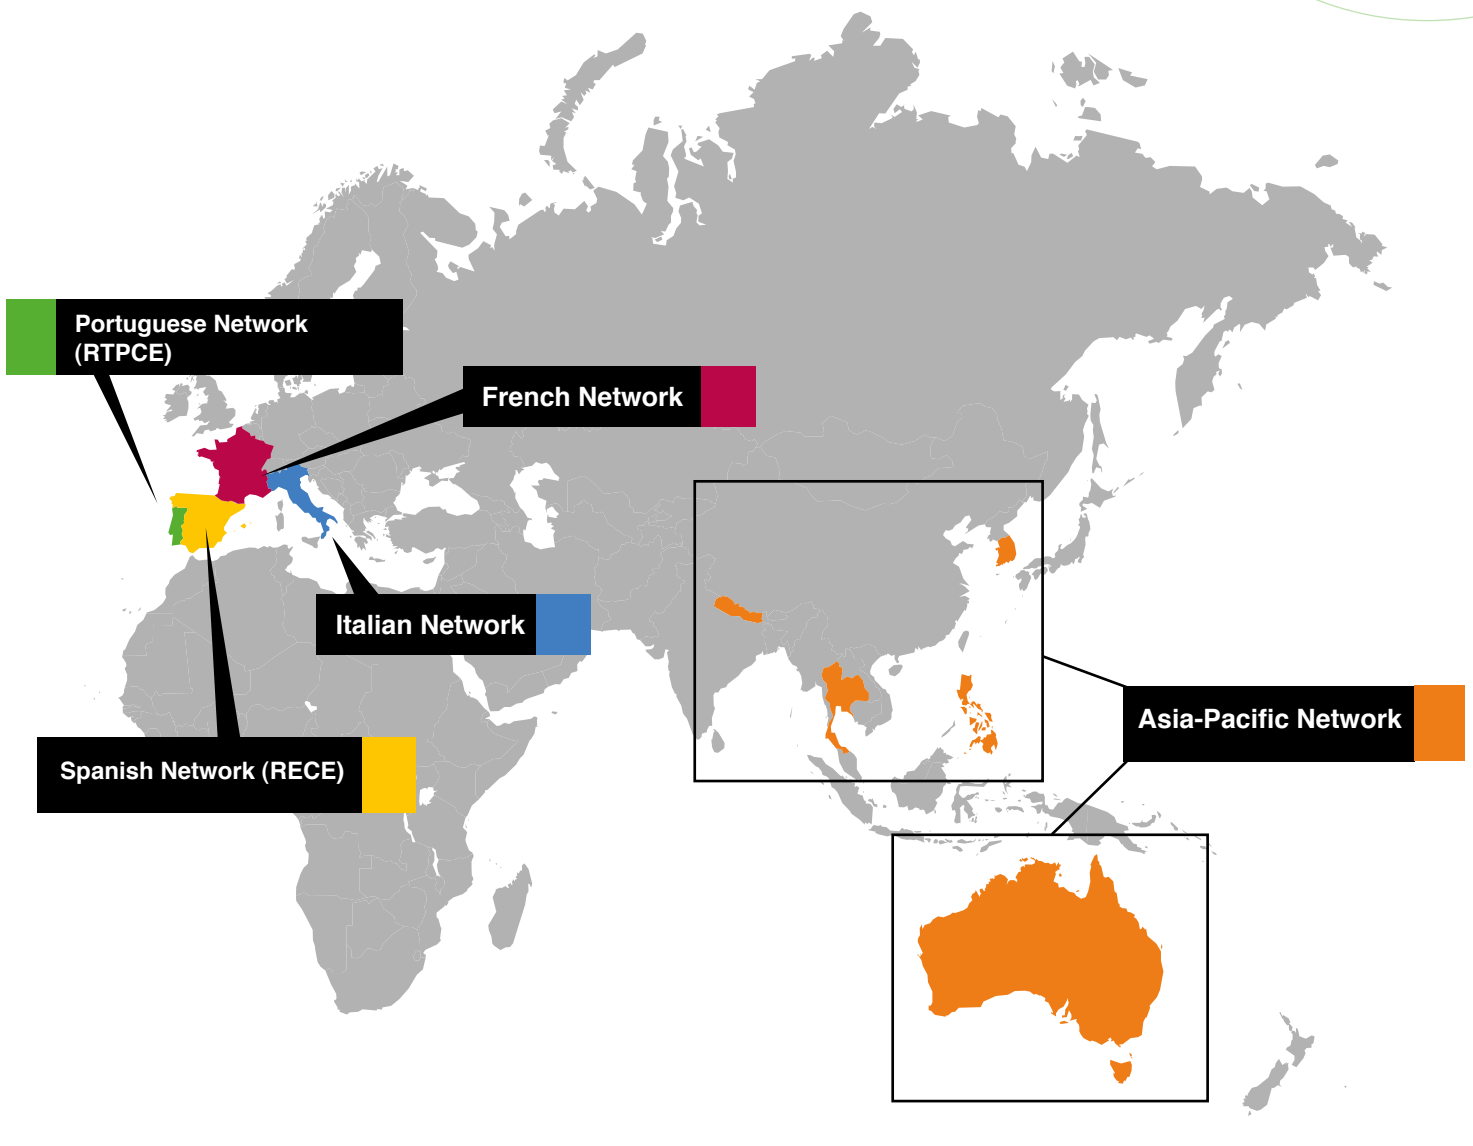

Toluca was the venue for the 3rd Meeting of the Educating Cities of Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean (23rd-24th April). During the Encounter there was a meeting of the cities of the Mexican Network. The cities of Miranda do Corvo (6th March) and Braga (3rd July) hosted two Meetings of the Portuguese Network and the city of Almada the 6th National Congress of the Portuguese Network (11th-13th November).

A meeting of the Asia-Pacific Network took place in Changwon (28th May) with the aim of progressing with the preparations for the 7th Meeting of the Network which was held in Gumi (3rd and 4th November). Parallel to this, Santo André hosted the Meeting of the Brazilian Network (3rd and 4th November). For its part, Rivas Vaciamadrid and various Spanish cities hosted a number of meetings of the Follow-up Commission and the thematic networks of the Spanish Network. It is also worth highlighting the meeting of the group of member cities from the Northern Europe which was held in Helsinki (22nd September) with the aim of advancing in the constitution of a new territorial network.

The networks are represented in the Executive Committee of the Association either by their coordinating cities or by cities included in the network.

International Congresses

The International Congresses take place every two years and represent a key moment for the Association given the fact that they allow widely dissemination of the work carried out by the member cities, with regard to a specific theme inside and outside the network.

During the Congresses, member cities have the chance of exchange and to make their best practices known and to take an in-depth look at certain aspects of the Charter of Educating Cities. They are also an opportunity for establishing new contacts, the creation of synergies and mutual learning. Furthermore, they play a notable role in the diffusion of the Charter of Educating Cities and in the extension and consolidation of the Association in the countries where they are organised.

The study visits to initiatives of the organising city of the Congress and exchanges with local stakeholders are other relevant elements in the programme of the IAEC Congresses.

For the host city, the organisation of the event contributes to the fact of different municipal departments and institutions of the civil society becoming aware of their educating role. Therefore, the Congress is a unique opportunity to visualize the city's commitment towards education in the widest sense, and to attract the media and make it known to the rest of the world.

The Final Declarations of the Congresses allow the member cities to highlight the work carried out, promote changes that will guide the future action, and lobby the governmental organisations on the importance of policies of proximity.

Dear friends,

As Mayor of Rosario it is a great pleasure for me to inform you that we are working to welcome you at the 14th International Congress of Educating Cities which will take place from 1st to 4th June 2016.

Rosario has made much progress within the framework of the IAEC, since 1996, year in which we adopted the Charter of Educating Cities with the aim of contributing to the construction of a better city for our citizens, but above all to be able to share experiences with cities from all over the world, united by this common goal.

We are well aware that the current major challenge of societies is to find new and better ways of living with together, to share spaces, rules and regulations, streets, words, codes, customs. We know that living together is learned by exercising coexistence day after day, and there's always one more step to give. From the local governments we carry out actions so that this can happen, because it is our duty to play an active role so that this learning can take place.

It is for this reason that we have chosen to think together in the Congress the theme "Living together in our cities". We propose organising the exchange of ideas and debates around three axes and challenges: that of building cities; of achieving equality in the cities; and the challenge of inhabiting the cities, as a commitment towards the construction of fairer communities, that promote solidarity and respect diversity, highlighting equal opportunities and social integration as the principles that enable this construction.

As organisers of the coming congress, we are taking important steps so that you can get the most out of this unique opportunity of meeting and exchange. Our major goal is to lay the conditions so that the work carried out in Rosario allows each and every one of the cities to put strategies for daily actions into practice with the aim of improving the quality of life.

Within this framework, we have set up an Executive Secretariat; an Academic Committee; an Organising Committee that counts on representatives from all the areas of the Municipality of Rosario and a Committee of Honour that gathers together relevant personalities from our city.

In Rosario we are convinced about the important role that cities have been called on for promoting, along with our neighbours, the creation of educational fields that educate, that are more human, more sustainable and where everyone fits in. We invite you to take a tour around the city and to discover it in each space, but fundamentally that you get to know the most important thing that this city has, that is the simplicity, solidarity and the warmth of its people.

We look forward to seeing you all!

Ms. Mónica Fein

Mayor of Rosario and IAEC Vice-President

Educating Cities Award

With the aim of recognising and providing international visibility to the work that the member cities carry out so as to improve the quality of life in their cities, in November 2015 the Executive Committee agreed the Conditions and called the first edition of the Educating Cities Award.

The Award will be granted to three innovative experiences from three member cities, for their contribution and initiatives aimed at best living together. Cities working for the collective wellbeing, providing attention for diversity, fostering equality, participation, access to public services and information, and the development of social ties so that everyone feels part of them are good candidates for the Award. But equally, cities, which have spaces and opportunities for meeting, in which the citizenship can have a direct effect and influence on the formulation of the public policies, and in which it is possible for joint solutions to be sought to the new challenges.

The winning cities of the first edition will be invited to present their initiative in a plenary session of the 14th International Congress (Rosario, 1st - 4th June 2016).

Personalised Attention

The Association and its networks open up channels of dialogue so as to offer personalised attention to their members and to be able to respond to their demands. In this sense, the establishment of contacts is promoted between the member cities and collaboration is provided in the organisation of study visits with the aim of fostering the knowledge of notable initiatives in situ. Furthermore, after the electoral processes, advice and support is provided for the new municipal teams with regard to the commitment of their cities towards the principles of the Charter of Educating Cities, as well as to those cities who wish to join or have recently been incorporated.

Collaboration with other entities

The IAEC collaborates with other organisations or institutions with similar or coinciding interests, in the organisation of meetings and the starting up of joint projects. It is worth pointing out the fact that the IAEC is a member of the Executive Bureau of the UCLG. Moreover, the IAEC receives invitations to participate in various events and forums promoted by third parties which allows its work to be made known, and to share knowledge and methodologies.

Communication

The Association aims to achieve a broad dissemination of contents and best practices and to do so it makes use of various channels of communication. This provides visibility to the work that member cities carry out and achieve the fact that new cities become aware of the educational impact of the diverse municipal policies and actions, and to ensure that they are strongly committed towards education.

Online communication

Virtual channels of communication allow regular dissemination of the activities of the Association and of the principles of the Charter of Educating Cities on a global scale, as well as making possible the gradual emergence of a global 'educating' community.

The permanent updating that the transitory world of internet requires, leads us to opt for highly flexible and sustainable channels of communication from the economic and technological point of view. By means of statistics, we can get to know the interests of the users and to personalise specific contents for different groups or audiences. This also allows a greater scope and makes the Association's printed publications longer lasting.

Educating Cities International

Documents Databank

Since its beginnings, the IAEC has promoted the creation of spaces and tools so that the cities can share models of intervention and best practices and can learn from each other.

The BIDCE is made up of a Bank of Experiences and a Documents Database which can be consulted freely by Internet and which stores a large quantity of ordered and interrelated information.

The Bank of Experiences contains more than 1,000 experiences, which illustrate the implementation of the principles of the Charter of Educating cities, which can be consulted in the three official languages of the Association: Spanish, French and English.

In 2015, 21 new innovative experiences were published that can be adapted and put into practice by other cities.

In a complementary way to the consultation of the Bank, from the Secretariat best practices of the member cities are periodically made known, either in digital format as "Focus Experiences", or by means of printed publications.

In 2015, the Focus Experiences tackled issues such as socio-community intervention, the promotion of living together and public space maintenance and preservation, social volunteering, or the new conception of the libraries as meeting spaces and for lifelong learning.

Focus Experience

Nº 20 Community promotion and intervention in the neighbourhood of Los Ámbitos, Rivas Vaciamadrid (Spain)

Nº 21 Youth Educating Summer, Toluca (Mexico)

Nº 22 Archimedes Library, Settimo Torinese (Italy)

Selection criteria of experiences

- Experiences of all the areas of local political action.
- Experiences that can be replicated and/or adapted by other cities.
- Experiences that illustrate the diversity of the cities included in the Association.
- Experiences that have led to positive urban and social transformations that benefit the citizenship.
- Innovative experiences that provide added value or something new in relation to the existing experiences in the bank.

Exhibitions

From the Secretariat and the territorial networks work is done on designing communicative actions that contribute to the consolidation of the work carried out and the development of synergies between the municipal government and the civil society.

In 2015, the Travelling Exhibition “Educating Cities: Local Actions, Global Values”, which includes experiences from 7 member cities and information about the Association, was presented in Sao Carlos (Brazil).

Parallel to this, the Latin American Exhibition of Educating Cities “The principles in Action” was presented in the cities of Esquel, Godoy Cruz, Pergamino, Río Cuarto, Rosario and Totoras (Argentina) and Montevideo (Uruguay).

For its part, the travelling exhibition of the Portuguese Network was presented in 5 cities (Loulé, Fundão, Pombal, Santarém and Silves). The exhibition presents a selection of projects and best practices from the Portuguese member cities.

These exhibitions provide to the members a tool for advancing and consolidating their policies and initiatives as Educating Cities. The IAEC invites all the cities that host them to carry out an introspective work of reflection about the actions that are undertaken for improving the quality of life of their citizens and for identifying the progress made with regard to the fulfilment of the Charter. It is also an opportunity for the cities to make public their commitment towards citizen education as a strategic and transversal axis of their political project.

The modalities of the territorial exhibition help to reduce the waiting times and the costs of the move and allow a greater scope.
